The second annual football combat between Kansas and Missouri was played on Thanksgiving day, Thursday, November 24, 1892, says the Kansas City Star. The game was played on October 31, the year before. Kansas again won, although before the game the indications pointed toward a Missouri victory. The score was 12 to 4. The Jayhawkers scored a touchdown and kicked goal in each half. Missouri scored her only touchdown in the second half, but missed goal. A touchdown counted four points and a goal two. In those days there were four downs and five yards to gain. The lineup of the battle follows:

Tigers at Coates House.

The Missouri team stopped at the Coates House, the hotel that afterward came to be known as the home of the Kansas, even as the Midland became the lair of the Tigers. The game was played at Exposition park before a crowd described as "three times as big" as the one that witnessed the first annual game between the two schools. Fred Cornell was the referee and George Devol the umpire. The game was played on a "typical football day." Here is a paragraph from the story of the game as printed in the Star:

"It was a nasty, raw day, cloudy, cold with an east wind blowing. Along about the time the Fifteenth street cable cars began to turn from yellow to black with the people going to the game, a chilly, drizzling rain began to fall. This worried a good many of the people who were bound for the park. They began to wonder if the boys would play on such a bad day. But the wise ones laughed at this. They knew the weather was just right for the players."

The familiar "Rock Chalk!" yell of the Kansas was heard on all sides, and Missouri, too, had a yell, a new one. It went this way: "Rah! rah! rah! Missouri, M. S. U-ni-ver-si-tee, Hurrah, Hurray, Yes sir-ee!"

Kansas the First to Score.

Kansas scored the first touchdown after twenty minutes of play, and the goal was kicked. The first half ended with that score, Kansas 6, Missouri 0. In the second half the Missouri team chalked up its touchdown, but missed the goal, making the score 4 to 6. The last score of the Jayhawkers, and the subsequent goal, made the count, Kansas 12, Missouri 4, the way it was when the final whistle blew. There were more accidents in this game than in the battle of the year before. Anderson, the Missouri quarterback, was compelled to leave the game on account of a broken collar bone. One of the Shawhans went to the side lines with a badly wrenched knee, and Vance was knocked out. "Baby" Anderson, the Missouri quarter, was one of the Tiger stars. Young at center was a strong player and Con-

Wright declared he had been waiting five years to see Missouri whip Kansas and he believed he was going to have his wish realized Thanksgiving Day. "Ozark" said he would die happy if the Tigers won then.

"Gene" Blodgett a Speaker.

R. E. ("Gene") Blodgett, another graduate, now studying law at Washington University, told how he had come to Columbia to "root" for the Tigers. "But it will be a fight," he added. "Washington has a good, game team. They'll fight and they'll take their defeat like gentlemen."

Between speeches the band played. Everybody gave nine "rahs" for everybody else. The meeting closed with the singing of "Old Missouri."

ley did great work. For Kansas, Kinzie played well. Kinzie captained the Kansas eleven the year previous, but did not get to play in the game with Missouri on account of an injury. He more than made up in this game for his absence in the first year's clash. "Shorty" Hammil, the big guard who later on played the famous guards back play with Mosse, made his first appearance with the team from Lawrence this year. Coleman was again at center, and Piatt, who played an end the year before, moved to the fullback position this year. Champlin was again in the lineup for Kansas and again he was a star performer. On the Missouri team were the Thompson brothers and the Shawhan brothers, and all four were great players.

The Missouri team had a bulldog named Grover on the side lines as a mascot, but the dog failed to bring the luck that mascots are supposed to bring. Missouri's only score was due to fierce and persistent line bucking. The Tigers worked the ball down the field yard by yard until the one-yard line of the Kansas was reached. Then a Tiger back was pushed over. The last touchdown of the Jayhawkers was the result of a trick sprung from a wedge formation. While the Missourians were engaged in the work of piling up the wedge, Kinzie shot out of the "V" with the ball tucked under his arms. Piatt and Shepard interfered for him and he raced across the Missouri goal line. An incident in the battle is told this way in the story of the game:

"Also Mr. Piatt of Kansas and Mr. Anderson of Missouri indulged in a brief but highly thrilling round with their bare hands over a very shady tackle which Mr. Piatt had applied to the neck of Mr. Anderson."

Piatt was known as a rough but a great player.

Charges that Secretary is Aligned with Crooked Party Bosses.

By United Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The "World" has begun a fight against Secretary Root for senator, printing a long article about Root in which Ryan's lawyer attacks Root's corporation connections. The article reviews the connection of the Secretary toward Croker, Ryan, W. C. Whitney and Harriman. It quotes a letter of Harriman's as saying "Root engineered Ryan's success."

The article refers to Morse and says that Root contrived practically the same offense in connection with the old State Trust Company.

It declares that President Roosevelt, when governor of New York, suppressed the report of the State Superintendent of Banks which revealed the facts.

MUSICAL COMEDY TONIGHT

"Flower of the Ranch" at the Columbia Theater.

"The Flower of the Ranch" which comes to the Columbia Theater tonight is a musical play in three acts, all the scenes of which have been laid in the rugged west, with colorful and complete scenic settings. The book, lyrics and music of the play have been written by Joseph E. Howard, composer of "The Time, the Place and the Girl," "The Girl Question," "Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella" and other successful works.

The play's musical numbers, of which there are some twenty, are logically and naturally introduced, and a romping spirited chorus of handsome young women who not only sing but dance with grace and vigor, add to the interest of an entertainment that last season was declared by New York, Boston and Chicago papers to be the most novel and pleasurable of the entire season.
